Who is the course for:
We recommend that you gain at least a grade 5 or above in History at GCSE, as without this level of prior attainment you will struggle to reach the level required for A level. This is a major step-up from GCSE. You will be expected to talk and explain your answers and to be prepared to argue and debate. You will also need to be able to write answers that are several sides of A4 by the end of the course. There will be the expectation that you do regular homework, personal study and read around the topic. There will be a lot of quiz style homework to make sure that you learn the key facts and improve your recall over time. The emphasis will be on you organizing your time in order to maximize your progress. This is a course which prepares you for Higher Education. Due to the rigour of the exam questions students are required to produce arguments and not simply learn and repeat “answers”. The more you research the topics, the easier this will become.

Where next:

History A level is highly regarded at all universities and is highly valued by the Russell group of universities as it is still considered to be one of the traditionally rigorous subjects of enquiry, debate and argument.

The literacy rich content of the course, the depth of enquiry and communication skills which you will need to develop during A2, will compliment most other A Levels.

History study skills are very employable assets in a wide range of careers. History is considered to be an excellent springboard into Law, Politics, Economics, Sociology and the Social Sciences, Government, Diplomacy, Civil Service, Management, Languages, Education, American Studies, European studies and any career where the analysis of complex data is required to be analysed and presented to others in a coherent and understandable format.
